- Careers: Holders of the BTS in vehicle maintenance work in companies in manufacturers' after-sales networks, brand dealerships, independent companies or networks, vehicle fleet maintenance departments (large companies or the State), manufacturers' after-sales methods departments. Workshop receptionist, service advisor, team or unit manager, diagnostic technician, manufacturer's technical advisor are the most common professions and functions in after-sales departments.

- Course continuation: The BTS vehicle maintenance is a qualifying diploma that does not necessarily require further study. Nevertheless, there are several avenues to pursue: training, management, expertise, teaching. The vocational licences available (bac+3) are in the mechanical engineering sector (engineering sciences, industrial techniques pathway, electronic equipment) and bodywork (technology, maintenance of multi-technology systems). A technical-commercial orientation may also be considered.

Parcours Réussite :

. Lucas M., Lucas M., who has a scientific baccalaureate, wanted to go into the automotive sector with a particular interest in trucks. After two years of work experience on a vocational training certificate in vehicle maintenance, with the option of road transport vehicles, he went on to gain a professional licence. Currently in charge of an Iveco branch, he regularly returns to GRETA CFA to recruit his new employees.
